

LAUNCH PLAN

Four weeks, one starting offer

Use with Chapters 7-9 (book pp. 175-263). Use the prospect spreadsheet for dates and stages; these pages hold your thinking and draft messages.

Week	Aim	Evidence of progress
1	Extract your advantage	Career wins and three candidate problems
2	Validate a problem	Three buyer conversations or specific observations
3	Package one offer	Deliverables, price range, scope, review steps
4	Start conversations	Warm outreach and scheduled follow-ups

Protected hours available each week; include a buffer

The one problem and buyer group you will test first

Four-week activity goal: conversations, not promised sales

How you will protect client information when using AI

Extract and choose

Chapter 4 and Chapter 9, pp. 84-110 and 244-246. Use the Expertise to Offer Workbook for the detailed work.

The strongest career win and the result it supports

Your three client problems and why each buyer might care

Which buyer and problem will you test first? Why?

Next action, owner (you), and date

Validate through discovery

Chapter 5 and Chapter 9, pp. 111-137 and 246-250. Ask questions; do not present assumptions as findings.

Which three reachable buyers or informed contacts will you speak with?

What happens now, and what triggers the problem?

How often does it happen and what does it cost in time or money?

What have you tried? What budget or approval would a solution require?

What outcome would make this worth changing?

Evidence supporting or contradicting your original assumption

Take notes immediately

Chapter 7, pp. 192-201. Keep sensitive client information out of public AI tools unless the client has approved a suitable process.

Business/contact, date, relationship and consent to follow up

Problem in the contact's own words

Consequence of inaction and any baseline numbers

Current workaround, stakeholders, budget and timing

Specific next step you agreed to and its date

A conversation-ready offer

Chapter 6 and Chapter 9, pp. 138-174 and 250-251. Confirm price and time commitments in the Excel planner.

One sentence: buyer, problem and desired result

What the first paid engagement includes and excludes

Fixed fee or price range, payment timing, and estimated delivery hours

Baseline, measure, and realistic proof of improvement

Client approvals and human review before delivery

Warm outreach: first touch

Chapters 7 and 9, pp. 175-201 and 251-254. Adapt the language to a real relationship; never imply you observed a problem you have not verified.

Email: invitation to learn

Subject: A question about [specific process]

Hi [Name], I enjoyed [genuine connection]. I am speaking with [type of business] about how they handle [specific process]. Your perspective would help me understand what works and what gets in the way. Would you be open to a 15-minute conversation next week? No preparation needed. - [Your name]

LinkedIn: short invitation

Hi [Name], I am exploring how [type of business] handles [specific process]. Given your experience with [relevant context], would you be open to a brief conversation? I would value your perspective. - [Your name]

Your version: refer to the relationship and make a small, specific ask

Record date sent, response, and next action in the prospect tracker

After a real conversation

Chapter 7, pp. 192-201. The three touches below follow a substantive call. Stop or adjust if someone declines or asks you not to contact them.

Touch 1: thank-you and recap (within one business day)

Email: Subject: Good speaking with you. Hi [Name], thank you for explaining how [process] works today. You mentioned [their wording] and its effect on [result]. I will [agreed next step] by [date]. Did I capture that correctly? - [Name]

LinkedIn: Thanks for speaking today, [Name]. I noted [problem] and [consequence]. I will send [agreed item] by [date]. Please correct anything I missed.

Touch 2: one useful observation (after the agreed interval)

Email: Subject: One idea on [process]. Hi [Name], I thought about your point regarding [specific friction]. One small test could be [useful, bounded suggestion]. Would that fit the way your team works? Happy to compare notes if useful. - [Name]

LinkedIn: Your point about [friction] stayed with me. One small test might be [suggestion]. Would that be practical for your team?

Your personalized observation; verify its accuracy before sending

Invitation, then weekly review

Chapters 7 and 9, pp. 198-201 and 255-263. Use a calendar date in the prospect tracker rather than automatic repeated messages.

Touch 3: clear invitation (roughly 1-2 weeks later, when appropriate)

Email: Subject: Next step on [problem]. Hi [Name], is improving [specific outcome] still a priority? If so, I can outline a small first project with [deliverable] and a defined fee. Would a 15-minute call on [two possible days] be useful? If the timing has changed, no problem. - [Name]

LinkedIn: Is [outcome] still a priority, [Name]? I can outline a small first step with a clear deliverable and fee. Open to a brief call, or should I leave it for another time?

Your version with a direct, low-pressure invitation

Weekly reality review

Conversations, follow-ups completed, calls booked, offers sent

What you learned about demand, pricing or delivery

One change and the three next actions for the coming week